FUND COMMENTARY

The US reporting season for the second quarter is close to completion. We now have good information to consider as to how successfully businesses have been able to recover from the effects of the pandemic. We consider consolidated S&P 500 data in this context as a reasonable proxy for USA Inc.

Despite the severe economic lock-down measures, revenue has already recovered to pre-pandemic record levels. Further to this, both EBIT (Earnings before Interest and Tax) and EPS (Earnings per Share) have recovered to levels in excess of 10% above their pre-pandemic levels. Consensus expectations for 12 month forward EPS currently exceed the pre-pandemic level by over 15%.

Whilst revenue recovery logically tracks economic recovery, the surprising factor is the strong recovery in profitability. The Operating Margin is already at a record level of 14.4%, compared to the previous record of 14.1% in 2015. That period was six years after the Financial Crisis recession, highlighting how rapidly high profitability levels returned this time. All credit to administrations steering economic recovery, and especially to business management teams managing profitability under extreme conditions.

It is also striking that this margin recovery has been achieved with only a modest recovery in capacity utilisation, currently at 76.1%. It is still below the average of 77.5%, with a pre-pandemic cycle high of 79.9%. This implies good potential for further margin recovery as economic growth continues.

Cost pressures as a consequence of pandemic-inflicted supply line bottlenecks are not yet a dominant theme in company results. Whilst some of that may later become more apparent, conversely it seems easing in some of those costs are also starting to filter through (e.g. Iron-Ore, Copper, Lumber). In this context, overall US inflation expectations have also started to abate. Nevertheless, it may be that operational benefits of further increases in capacity utilisation can absorb some of the potential cost pressures. We are, therefore, not overly concerned about the profit outlook despite the high base that has been reached quickly in this economic cycle.

The TER displayed, which is calculated using data for the period 1 November 2018 to 31 March 2021, is based on the ASISA methodology, is higher than the expected TER of the fund due to the high weight allocated to past costs prior to the increase in fund size. The estimated actual TER payable by a client investing into the fund today would be 1.70%. Transaction Costs are a necessary cost in administering the Financial Product and impacts Financial Product returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of Financial Product, the investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER. Disclosed performance information is calculated after all fees and costs deducted. ² All fees inclusive of VAT where applicable.
