PERFORMANCE DISCLOSURE

Past performance is not a guide to future performance. The value of investments can fall. Investors may not get back the amount invested. Income from investments may vary and is not guaranteed. The return may increase or decrease due to currency fluctuations. Performance figures are net of fees and charges. The Fund may hold a relatively small number of stocks as compared to many other funds. This may make the Fund's performance more volatile than would be the case if it had a more diversified investment portfolio. For a full list of risks applicable to this fund, please refer to the Prospectus.

FUND COMMENTARY

February was another volatile month. Ironically, this time it resulted from constructive information on the US economic front.

Investors have increasingly formed the view that US economic recovery may happen more quickly than previously thought. Successful vaccine rollouts, fiscal stimulus and high pent-up demand boost optimism on this front. A sharp V-curve recovery is in process of becoming the consensus view, with opinions that the virus-induced recession may be one of the shortest on record. Current expectations are for US GDP to recover to its end of 2019 level by the end of the third quarter this year already. This target timing is around two quarters sooner than perceptions a few months ago.

This optimism is affecting the Bond market directly. The US ten-year Treasury yield increased half a percent from 0.9% at the end of 2019 to the current level of 1.4%. This is almost three times its lowest level just seven months ago. Five year US inflation expectations (as reflected by breakeven rates) increased from 2.0% at the end of 2019 to the current level of 2.4%. Some references to 'bond vigilantes' taking on central banks are back for the first time in a very long time.

The US bond market currently mirrors its reactions following the Credit Crisis. Inflation expectations then reached similar levels as currently (and subsequently receded). Both the actual Core CPI and CPE inflation measures then marginally exceeded the Federal Reserve's target 2% level for a short period, and subsequently receded.

Seeing inflation's very low recent recession readings, upcoming data may well spike beyond the Federal Reserve's target rate and continue to unsettle some investor nerves in the process. It is, though, our perception that the bond market is currently more reflective of a normal economic recovery process, and are not yet convinced that excessive structural inflation is an imminent threat. The current market preference for cyclical recovery investment opportunities may present good buying opportunities in stable compounders.

INVESTMENT STRATEGY

- Invest for sustainable growth
- Fundamental research driven
- Particular focus on quality of management, balance sheet strength, return on invested capital, free cash flow, ability to grow dividends each year
- Bottom-up approach to identify exceptional businesses
- Global orientation, with emerging market exposure
- High conviction concentrated portfolio
- Predominantly larger capitalisation businesses, also consider exceptional medium-sized ones
- Buy to hold and disciplined selling
- No benchmark orientation, no active trading, no leverage, no hedging
