FUND COMMENTARY

February was a busy month on the financial reporting calendar for a number of our core holdings, affording us the opportunity to check in on the health of these businesses as the world continues to navigate its way through the global coronavirus pandemic. As quality-centric fundamental investors, one of the characteristics we prize in a business is strong and consistent cash flow generation. In a period replete with challenges, we are encouraged by the delivery of a number of our businesses in this regard.

BHP Group ("BHP") delivered free cash flows of $5.2 billion in the 6 months to December 2020, declaring a record interim dividend of $1.01 per share (equating to almost the same amount of free cash flow delivered in the interim period). In addition, BHP's gearing ratio¹ improved to 18.1% from 19.5% a year earlier. The business appears to be exhibiting disciplined adherence to its internal capital allocation framework, striving to balance value creation, cash returns to shareholders and balance sheet strength.

Similarly, British American Tobacco ("BAT") increased free cash flow by 12% to £7.3 billion in the year ended December 2020, driven by strong growth in net cash generated from operations and lower net capital expenditure. The business also reduced borrowings by 3.1% and declared a dividend of 215.6p per share, up 2.5% on the prior year's dividend. BAT remains a highly cash generative business, and we expect this characteristic to continue to serve investors well over the long term.

Finally, Mondi's results for the year ended December 2020 illustrated the attractive through-the-cycle cash flow generation capability of the business: the business reported free cash flow of €675 million at a healthy free cash flow margin of 9.7%. With net debt down -19% year-on-year and order books reportedly improving into 2021, the outlook appears to be improving for this quality paper and packaging business.

This continued delivery has served to further reinforce our confidence that investing in businesses that exhibit responsible stewardship, enduring business models and attractive growth prospects, at the appropriate price, will continue to serve our investors well over the long term.
