PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

The Global Balanced Portfolio returned 2.4% in March, taking 2022 returns so far to -2.7%.

The economic and geopolitical environment has evolved rapidly in the past three months. The Russian invasion of Ukraine adds a new dimension to an already uncertain outlook, particularly the post-pandemic recovery and future path of inflation. The market backdrop has been volatile, creating a challenging environment for the portfolio. Despite a meaningful recovery in equities since the initial invasion, daily gyrations have been vicious at times, with most markets posting losses for the first quarter. Bond yields have trended higher, as central banks have guided to a steeper rate hiking cycle. Importantly for inflation, commodity prices have surged, particularly core Russian exports like natural gas, wheat and oil, with meaningful effects on economic growth.

The portfolio has delivered negative returns in the first quarter, although our approach to diversify across multiple assets types has been beneficial. In particular, our allocation to broad commodities and physical gold, which combine to approximately 7% of the portfolio as of the end of March, returned 27.7% and 9.6% respectively. Most of the weakness was felt in the equity portfolio during January. Growth leaning managers, such as Stonehage Fleming Global Best Ideas and Driehaus US Small Cap, experienced a challenging period as expectations for interest rates were raised. We made three main changes to the portfolio in the first quarter. Firstly, we exited our dedicated position in emerging markets local currency debt, as geopolitical and economic headwinds intensified. We switched our allocation in the Nasdaq 100 ETF to the FTSE 100 ETF, in recognition of the tailwinds for the UK market, and we added a new position in short-dated US Treasury bonds, following a sharp increase in yields.
