FUND COMMENTARY

Global equity markets continued their strong recovery this year with sentiment supported by a better than expected earnings season, encouraging economic data and coronavirus vaccine optimism. September saw equity markets pause after registering strong gains since the end of March, as rising coronavirus cases and reimposed restrictions gave investors reason to take stock.

US equities outperformed during the quarter, with higher growth businesses preferred to more capital intensive businesses. However, there was evidence of some rotation towards the end of the quarter. Asian equities, and particularly Chinese equities, also outperformed. Stringent handling of the outbreak in China and evidence of strong economic recovery resulted in the market being the best performer and lifting other Asian equity markets. The UK continued to lag other regions due to reimposed economic restrictions and Brexit uncertainty.

Within the portfolio we saw the majority of funds outperform their respective benchmarks and the fund itself returned 5.9% vs 0.9% for the performance comparator. In particular there was strong performance from Fidelity, our emerging market fund manager, whose holdings in semiconductors, consumer businesses and more economically sensitive businesses performed well. We also saw good performances from our US focused quality/growth strategies, including the Stonehage Fleming Global Best Ideas Fund, Edgewood and the NASDAQ ETF.

Areas of the portfolio that had a more difficult quarter included Polar Global Insurance Fund, which is continuing to be impacted by negative sentiment over potential COVID-19 business interruption claims. Also, our more domestic focused UK manager, GLG, had a weak quarter following continued negative sentiment around Brexit; however, our other UK manager, Majedie, had a particularly good quarter versus UK markets.
