PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

The Global Multi-Asset Portfolio C GBP Class returned -0.9% in March vs -0.8% for the benchmark. During the month there was turbulence in the financial sector as a depositor run on Silicon Valley Bank resulted in its collapse, followed shortly by the takeover of Credit Suisse by UBS in Europe. The negative impact on equity markets in aggregate was short lived, with March seeing gains in US dollar terms.

Within the equity book, absolute returns were positive in US dollar terms but trailed broader equity markets. The key relative detractors in the month included our strategies with a greater bias to small and medium-sized companies, such as Driehaus and Dimensional. It was also a difficult month for our dedicated non-life insurance strategy, Polar Insurance, which was caught up in the indiscriminate selling of businesses labelled as Financials despite being less directly impacted – we expect the sector to recover as fears over the banking sector settle. The best performer in the month was the Stonehage Fleming Global Best Ideas strategy. After a disappointing 2022, the strategy continues to perform well this year and was aided by a number of its health care stocks (Zoetis, Stryker) performing strongly.

All of our fixed income positions saw positive returns in US dollar terms as yields fell. The best performing positions were those invested in US government bonds, but the credit positions also delivered reasonable returns. All of our Alternative positions had a positive month in US dollar terms and our gold position did particularly well – supported by concerns in the banking system, falling yields and a weaker dollar.
