COMMENTARY

The month of March has taken share prices to record levels (as reflected by the MSCI World index, including Emerging Markets). The first quarter this year has delivered an excellent equity performance result. Whilst many refer to high valuation levels, it seems that supportive economic fundamentals continue to attract investors.

As a longer-term investor, our focus is more on understanding the risks for structural rather than tactical breaks in share prices. Whilst the latter can happen anytime, the former is more confined to weakening economic conditions leading to a recession.

Shareholders have several important economic indicators on their side. Overall consumer confidence in the US is rising sharply and the builders' confidence index is close to twenty-year record levels. US CEO and small business confidence indices are currently exceeding levels preceding the credit crisis. While the US manufacturing sector experienced negative growth through 2015 and 2016, the Institute of Supply Management's PMI index monitoring purchasing managers' impressions for manufacturers has increased sharply and is currently approaching record levels. Strikingly, this critical economic indicator is currently constructive for all the major world economies, including China.

We perceive trends in world trade as a good reflection of the health of the world economy. Growth in volume terms dropped from around +4% levels in 2014, reaching zero growth last year. Growth levels are accelerating again, currently at +3.4%. Europe's trade surplus has been rising sharply since 2013, also in US$ terms.

Even though we continue to expect only moderately accelerating world economic growth this year, the above mentioned synchronised growth is of further value. This can hopefully postpone the next US recession and a structural break in share prices for a while. Against this, a tactical break can happen anytime and offer new buying opportunities.

RISK FACTORS

Stonehage Fleming Global Best Ideas Equity Fund (the "Fund") is an equity fund. Investors should be willing and able to assume the risks of equity investing in particular, fluctuations in market price, adverse issuer or market information and the fact that equity securities rank below other corporate securities, including debt securities, in right of payment in the event of issuer insolvency. The value of the Fund's portfolio changes daily and can be affected by changes in currencies, interest rates, general market conditions and other political, social and economic developments, as well as specific matters relating to the companies in whose securities the Fund invests. The Fund may hold a relatively small number of stocks as compared to many other funds. This may make the Fund's performance more volatile than would be the case if it had a more diversified investment portfolio.

Changes in the rates of exchange between currencies may cause the value of investments to go up or down in the reporting currency. In general, underlying investments denominated in foreign currency are not hedged back into the reporting currency. Among the factors that may influence currency values are trade balances, the levels of short-term interest rates, differences in relative values of similar assets in different currencies, long-term opportunities for investment and capital appreciation and political developments. Values may also be affected by developments relating to controls and restrictions on foreign currency remittance of proceeds of investments in a non-sterling jurisdiction.

All investments risk the loss of capital. No guarantee or representation is made that the Fund will achieve its investment objective. The value of investments may go down as well as up and the distributions can also go down or up and you may not receive back the full value of your initial investment. The risks outlined here are some of the more specific risks applicable to investment in the Fund and investors' attention is drawn to Appendix II of the Prospectus which provides more information on the types of risk factors investors should consider.

Whilst every effort is made to provide investors with accurate and up to date information, some of the information may be rendered inaccurate by changes in applicable laws and regulations. For example, the levels and bases of taxation may change. No information in this document should be interpreted as investment advice. If you feel unsure about the suitability of this investment for you, please consult with a professional financial adviser.
