PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

In March, the TM Stonehage Fleming International Fund performance was as follows:

- B share class units rose in value by 3.37%
- This performance was against a rise of 4.11% in the MSCI ACWI NR USD
- Fund and Index performance data sourced from Morningstar

Global equity markets have continued to exhibit a high degree of volatility as the Russia-Ukraine war entered its second month. The disruptions caused to some commodity markets; such as oil, gas and nickel; together with general supply chain issues continue to have an impact on various end markets. This is having an adverse effect on inflationary pressures, which were already building following the strong global economic recovery post the pandemic. For several countries in the western world, CPI is now expected to reach double digits in the next few months. As a result, central banks have started to raise interest rates in response. The keenly watched US Federal Reserve announced the long awaited 25 bps increase in March but a week later a hawkish Powell intimated that the next rise might be as much as 50bps. This caught markets off guard and led to a rise in the 10 year US Treasury yield to almost 2.5% as well as yield curve inversion.

During the month, China implemented new covid lockdowns in several cities including Shenzhen, a key industrial city, and later Shanghai. This adversely affected domestic consumer related companies such as Anta Sports and duty free companies in the region with travel interrupted. The holding in Sunny Optical detracted from performance as the continuing smartphone chip shortages are having a considerable effect on their short-term results. Energy stocks continued to move higher on the rising oil price. The Fund continued to add to both energy positions, building towards a more market neutral sector position. Profits were taken in Asian banks as they have performed well and reached target prices. The holdings in PayPal and Intuitive Surgical were sold as better investment opportunities were found elsewhere. The Fund lightened up on Estee Lauder and Air Products as they may be disproportionately impacted by slower consumer spending and higher energy prices respectively. Overall, the exposure to the US market was increased by topping up various positions as the US is expected to fare better in the current economic environment.

The IMF and other institutions have reduced guidance for global growth this year. The Fund is positioned in companies that are better able to withstand this slowdown and the associated inflationary pressures, preferring to hold price setters able to win market share. Q1 earnings will, however, be scrutinized closely for signs of deterioration or improvement in labour or supply chain.
