PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

In November the TM Stonehage Fleming International Fund performance was as follows:

- B share class units rose in value by 7.16%
- This performance was against a rise of 8.79% in the MSCI ACWI NR USD
- Fund and Index performance data sourced from Morningstar.

November was a strong month for global markets as a benign US election outcome alongside the success of three separate Covid-19 vaccine candidates buoyed sentiment. The vaccine news helped the cyclical sectors, such as energy, leisure and commodities to bounce the most. These sectors remain very depressed compared to a year ago, given the lacklustre outlook for many of them. The technology, discretionary and communication services sectors also participated in the rally, albeit to a lesser extent than the cyclical value sectors. The fund lost some relative ground during the month on account of the lack of exposure to deep value cyclical, but has been somewhat protected by the value names it does hold.

The fund continued to benefit from the additions made to value names; Geely Automobile, Asahi Group and JP Morgan Chase were amongst the top contributors over the period. The fund is now tilting towards companies that can continue to grow in 2021. This includes adding to names that have had earnings dampened by Covid-19, such as Estee Lauder, as well as adding new names such as Air Products, which has developed an innovative way to supply genuinely green hydrogen on an enormous scale.

The Ant Group IPO, scheduled to be the world's largest ever, was halted at the eleventh hour by the Chinese regulators, citing a need for increased capital requirements and oversight of the sector. The fund's holding in Alibaba, which owns a stake in Ant, fell on the news. This was then compounded by new regulations targeting the ecommerce sector more broadly to foster better competition and fair practice. Whilst we welcome these initiatives, the lack of clarity on how these rules will be implemented is causing uncertainty.

The fund has now exited the majority of its legacy positions with the completion of the sales of Enquest, Raytheon, Times China, Fortescue Metals and Bayer. After such a strong rally in November, some consolidation should be expected. However, we are entering the seasonally strong period of the year so further gains may be achieved before the year end.
