PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

The Numis Smaller Companies Index (ex. Investment Companies) increased by 5.0% in the month and finished the year on a strong note. The TM Stonehage Fleming Opportunities Fund moved closely in line with its value, advancing by 4.9%. Part of this performance will be attributed to an overweight position in the energy sector, where share prices performed well on the back of strong oil and gas prices. We also saw the emergence of takeover activity for our holding in Clinigen which promotes and licenses pharmaceuticals. Otherwise, there was limited news flow from our holdings where the majority have December year ends.

It is encouraging that although December can be a quiet month for smaller companies, it created the opportunity to add to several companies including Hunting (oil services), Made Technologies (outsourcing), and Zoo Digital (dubbing). A new holding added was CT Automotive, an IPO of a company which manufactures interior products such as dashboard vents and cup holders supplied to a large number of global car manufacturers with a variety of different models. To raise funds we disposed of our holding in BP and reduced our interest in Lloyds Bank, both of which had performed well.

The notable events in the month were the rise in inflation, the unexpected increase in interest rates and measures to combat the rapid spread of the Omicron strain of the Coronavirus. Fortunately, none of these seem to have had an adverse effect on the equity market. Some measures were taken to safeguard the spread of Omicron, and the country was not put into a full lockdown. It was recognised that the effects were not as serious as previous variants given full vaccination levels and booster jabs being administered to the population. Equally, the small increase in interest rates appears to not have a material impact on the economy. Inflationary pressures could have a greater impact, but most companies accept that the rises in energy and other input costs can potentially be offset, and some of the rises are passed on to customers. The rise in wage restraint should add to higher inflation as companies try to maintain margins, and we are mindful of the possible negative impact on some areas of industry.

Despite a mild winter, the high level of energy prices persists, with share prices in the oil and gas sector not fully accounting for the rise in earnings and cash flow which may now be expected. We feel comfortable with our exposure to the sector and feel that exciting prospects remain with the rest of the portfolio. Our exposure to the IT and healthcare sectors gives us confidence in the outlook. Although several uncertainties remain, we would look for a further recovery in the global and domestic economies and, moving forward, are positive that the fund is well positioned for whatever lies ahead.
