PERFORMANCE DISCLOSURE

Past performance is not a guide to future performance. The value of investments can fall. Investors may not get back the amount invested. Income from investments may vary and is not guaranteed. For a full list of risks applicable to this fund, please refer to the Prospectus. If the information is not displayed in your base currency, then the return may increase or decrease due to currency fluctuations. Source for all performance is Stonehage Fleming Investment Management Limited as at 31 October 2022. Total return (with dividends reinvested) is net of fees.

The fund can invest in a broad range of shares including AIM shares and smaller companies. Some of these investments carry a higher risk of failure and may be less liquid than shares listed on other exchanges. These shares may also be harder to sell quickly because of this lower liquidity. AIM shares and smaller company shares may also experience greater price volatility which could affect also the value of the fund.

PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

The London Stock market showed some recovery in the month but the TM Stonehage Fleming Opportunities Fund declined by 0.61% against a rise of 3.24% in the Numis Smaller companies (ex-investment companies) Index. A large part of the underperformance was due to our exposure to shares in the Oil & Gas sector where uncertainty exists on whether the existing "windfall" tax would be increased. Elsewhere the market was reassured by the incoming new Chancellor of the Exchequer with the reversal of tax proposals announced in the mini-budget.

To recap, the London Stock Market reacted badly to the fiscal measures announced under the Truss government. Sterling fell sharply against the US Dollar and yields on British Government stocks increased substantially. To reduce the cost of borrowing, the Bank of England intervened by purchasing gilts and this had a positive effect on mortgage rates. The new government policy is to produce a financially stable economy which would involve tax increases and spending cuts. These measures will not be known until mid-November when the Chancellor of the Exchequer announces his Autumn statement. Until then there is likely to be speculation and some uncertainty in the stock market.

Although there has been a small recovery in some areas of the stock market, generally share prices are still depressed and have reacted badly to any disappointing news or outlook. This gives opportunities to add to shares which have suffered a disproportionate fall and where the longer term prospects remain intact. A good example of this is IOG, the small gas producer in the Southern North Sea. It is a company which has brought on stream gas production from a standing start but suffered teething problems stabilising the production. The share price fell sharply on the back of a trading statement causing a change in management. After talking to the company, we concluded that the problems are surmountable and added to our holding. Similarly we increased our holding in Standard Chartered where the share price fell back despite the company producing encouraging figures. We have also added to other holdings in similar circumstances and reduced a couple of our larger holdings to recycle funds and diversify the portfolio.

October has been a month of unseasonal warm weather and oil & gas prices have eased back from their peak levels but there is still also a great deal of uncertainty in the energy markets. If prices stay at current levels it should help to ease inflationary pressures and be of benefit to the UK economy. Even at current levels the results from our holdings in the sector would still be attractive and cash generated from operations would be available for reinvestment in further drilling. Due to the continuing conflict in the Ukraine, the North Sea should remain as a key area for providing some of the energy needs of the UK.

Global inflation has caused Central Banks to increase interest rates and the cost of borrowing. Wage inflation would put pressure on companies as they look to increase prices to mitigate this higher costs. We have found that the majority of companies are able to do this and are sometimes able to re-negotiate contracts to take account of higher costs. Smaller companies tend to be relatively nimble when faced with cost cutting and at current share price levels there could also be an increase in opportunistic takeover activity. Even though the stock market has shown a small recovery there are many companies which could be attractive to private equity funds and especially those non-UK funds taking advantage of the weak sterling exchange rate. It has been seen on many occasions in the past that stock markets can recover when least expected and often before an economic recovery is seen. We feel that the current portfolio contains a large number of undervalued situations and is well placed to taken advantage of the market re-rating when it occurs.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION

This is a marketing communication issued by Stonehage Fleming Investment Management Limited (SFIM). SFIM is the investment manager of the Fund.

All investments risk the loss of capital. No guarantee or representation is made that the funds will achieve their investment objective.

The value of investments may go down as well as up. For products designed to return income, the distributions can also go down or up and you may not receive back the full value of your initial investment.

Derivatives have not been used but are allowed if appropriate for efficient asset management. The Fund only invests in UK assets but is allowed to hold shares on overseas exchanges. This would occur in the event of a company delisting from the London stock market and would not be expected to be material. Hence, there would be limited foreign exchange risk.
