PERFORMANCE DISCLOSURE

Past performance is not a guide to future performance. The value of investments can fall. Investors may not get back the amount invested. Income from investments may vary and is not guaranteed. The return may increase or decrease due to currency fluctuations. Performance figures are net of fees and charges. The Fund may hold a relatively small number of stocks as compared to many other funds. This may make the Fund's performance more volatile than would be the case if it had a more diversified investment portfolio. For a full list of risks applicable to this fund, please refer to the Prospectus.

FUND COMMENTARY

World equity markets staged a welcome recovery in January, following the extreme volatility in December. The MSCI World AC index had a positive return in all major currencies.

We listed the major reasons for the volatility in our December fact sheet. Some of the tactical reasons amongst these have now passed their one-off effects, but more importantly, it has also become clear that the fundamental economic outlook is not as uncertain as some had feared.

The Federal Reserve has made it clear that it will 'apply patience' in its tightening programme and will be 'data dependent' in its considerations. This has calmed many investors' nerves with a broader belief that the Fed may not be overly aggressive and unintentionally hurt the US economy. Fears for sharply rising interest rates have been abating, and the yield curve has stopped flattening (the long curve is actually steepening somewhat). The ISM Manufacturing PMI data in the US improved in January, with the closely watched New Orders component showing particular strength following a weaker reading in December. The continuing high US new employment data surprises many, and is reflecting in healthy consumption growth.

The strong US Dollar was a headwind to global capital markets on different fronts last year. It seems as if its strength has run most of its course, and it continued its slow process of 'rolling over' in January. On this theme, Emerging Market equities continue a new trend of outperforming developed markets and we can also expect most US businesses to benefit from a potentially weaker Dollar. This can support US company earnings growth.

It seems therefore that the US fundamental economic and business earnings outlook remain stable whilst some investors still await conclusive results from the US-Sino trade tariff negotiations.

All the Fund's holdings contributed positively to its performance in January. We have invested more in some of the existing holdings following our active investment programme in December.
